John Service accompanied me to the local airport, and I took off for London in a Convair lent by the Third Air Force. We ran into a bad thunderstorm, arriving [redacted] at Northolt about three-quarters of an hour behind schedule. I got home in time to dine with the Herters.

May 5, 1962 - Saturday

The Herters left this morning, to our great regret. I went to the office.

Frank Wisner came to see me at the house this afternoon. He seems to have completely recovered from his illness.

We went tonight as guests of the Austrian Ambassador, Schwarzenberg, to the Saville Theatre, to see "Photo Finish", written and starred in by Peter Ustinov. He is a brilliant actor, but as a dramatist, in this instance, rather long-winded. It is an amusing plot, in which the hero is shown at successive stages of his career. After three hours of the play, we went to the Austrian Embassy for dinner. The other guests were Mollie Buccleuch, Ted Heath, and Lady Moyra Hamilton. It was a gay little feast. To bed about two o'clock.

May 6, 1962 - Sunday

A quiet day at home. I read everything of a professional nature that had accumulated over the last few weeks, and am relieved at having done so.

Dean Acheson arrived from America a little before midnight, to stay. Alice is to follow tomorrow.

In the welter of correspondence about nuclear testing, one of the few favorable letters received is this one from Mr. Edward Lock:
